Declaring that you qualify for an extension

In order to qualify for an extension of your residence permit, you must continue to meet the requirements for issuing for your initial permit. By signing below, you and your spouse declare that you still qualify for family reunification.

The letter the Danish Immigration Service sent to you (the applicant) with your original residence permit/most recent extension states the grounds for granting you residency and any waivers that may have been granted. We recommend that you refer to the letter before completing the application form in order to ensure that you are aware all the requirements.

Providing false information in an application is subject to the following penalties:

- fine or imprisonment for up to two years
- repayment of the expenses the Danish state might have incurred as a result of the false information
- your (the applicant's) residence permit can be revoked

Qualifying for a family reunification residence permit

In order to complete this application form correctly you need to be aware that you and your spouse can be required to meet the following requirements:

- you must live at the same address
- your spouse must be able to support you financially
- you must live in adequately sized housing

Joint residency is required in all cases. The financial support and housing requirements can be waived in some cases.

The requirements can be waived if:

- your spouse has custody of a child under 18 from previous relationship
- your spouse has visitation rights with a child under 18 from a previous relationship
- your spouse suffers from a serious health condition or

- your spouse holds refugee status

The requirements you needed to meet in order to receive your original family reunification residence permit are indicated on the residence permit.

If the above-mentioned requirements applied when your current residence permit was granted, you must continue to meet them in order to qualify for an extension. If the requirements were waived, the reasons for granting the waiver must still exist, otherwise you could be required to meet the requirements.

The following are examples of how your situation might have changed and the effect the changes would have on your residence permit:

Example A: The housing and financial support requirements were waived when your current residence permit was granted because your spouse has visitation rights with a child under 18 from a previous relationship.

Situation 1: At the time of applying to extend your residence permit, your spouse still has visitation rights with the child under the same conditions that that existed when you applied for your original residence permit, and the child is still under 18. If this is the case, the conditions stipulated in your residence permit are unchanged. You should tick box B in Section 4.1, below, and your spouse should tick box B in Section 6.1.

Situation 2: At the time of applying to extend your residence permit, your spouse still has contact with his or her child, but the child is now over 18. If this is the case, you will normally be required to meet the housing and financial support requirements. Please remember to include sufficient documentation that you do so. In this case you should tick box C in Section 4.1, and your spouse should tick box C in Section 6.1.

If you and your spouse are unable to determine whether your situation has changed since your residence permit was granted, tick box D in Section 4.1, your spouse should tick box D in section 6.1.

The housing and financial support requirements

Housing

In order to qualify for a residence permit, you and your spouse must live in a reasonably sized residence as owners, member of a cooperative or tenants.

If you and your spouse continue to live at the same address as when you were granted your current residence permit, you do not need to submit further documentation.

Proof of adequately sized housing includes:

- a copy of your lease, if you live in a rented housing or
- a copy of your deed or final sale agreement, if you own your own residence

Financial support

If you have been granted residence on the condition that your spouse can support you financially, you must provide proof that you spouse can still do so. Acceptable documentation includes: a copy of your spouse's pay statements from the current year/past 12 months and a copy of your spouse's tax return.

By signing Section 5 below, you (the applicant) declare that you still qualify for a residence permit.

By signing Section 7 below, your spouse declares that you still qualify for a residence permit.

Enquiry

As part of your application to extend your residence permit in Greenland, the Danish Immigration Service may enquire with the Self-Rule authorities about your housing situation and whether your spouse is still able to support you financially, as well as whether there are other reasons for not extending your residence permit, such as public debt.
